

THROUGH

"Much like fashion, trends in the housewares industry go through cycles with old styles becoming relevant again with new generational twists. A 180-year company that constantly reinvents itself to stay current is Christofle. The Vertigo collection by the amazing Andrée Putman takes silver and bends it into fluid silhouettes that gives the hard metal a sense of movement."

"I believe in everyday luxury—even when it comes to statement jewelry. Miami designer Jaimie Nicole creates stackable onyx bracelets with diamonds that are such fun, I even wear them while I'm exercising."

SCENT OF THE HOUR "What can I say about the new Diana Vreeland collection of fragrances? With names like Extravagance Russe, Absolutely Vital, Perfectly Marvelous, Outrageously Vibrant and Simply Divine, they honor the heritage of what Diana was all about. I see them becoming instant classics."

THE DETAILS

"I particularly love the LVCEA watches by Bulgari because they're classic with modern edge. To me, they represent pure luxury and chicness itself. Plus, mine is so lightweight, I forget I am wearing it."

MINUTES

STEP IT UP

"A shoe collection should reflect all the many aspects of a woman's personality—and comfort levels. I tend to gravitate toward wedges, but my splurge for spring 2015 will definitely include one of the new high-heeled sandals by Givenchy. That leather! That golden heel! That's a sculpture, not a shoe."
